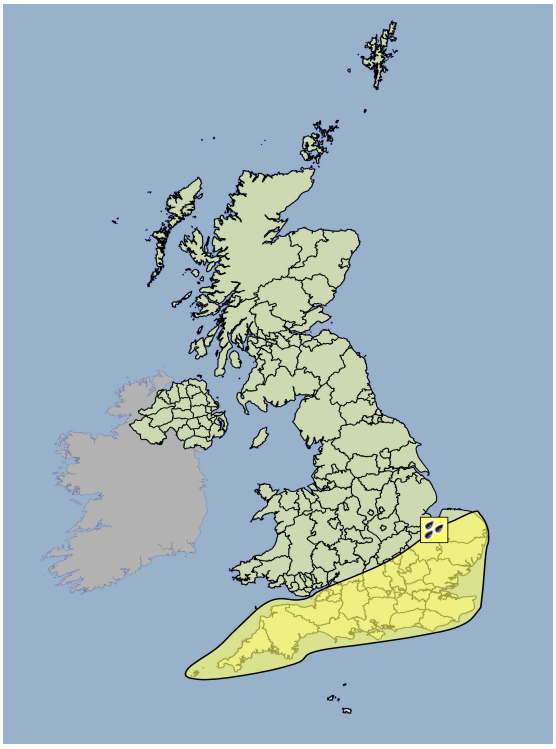
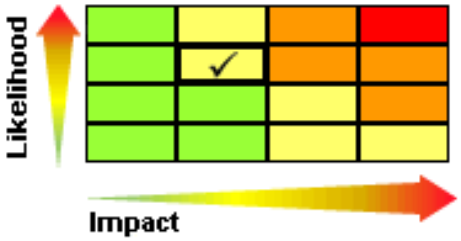
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A frontal wave is expected to move in from the southwest later today, bringing some heavy rain to southern England. Whilst there remains some uncertainty in the exact location of the heaviest rainfall, accumulations of 20-40 mm could be possible quite widely within the warning area, whilst 50-60 mm is possible in one or two places. Rain is expected to become increasingly confined to the south east through Wednesday.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 21:00 on Tue, 25th Aug 2015 until 18:00 on Wed, 26th Aug 2015

Outbreaks of rain, persistent and heavy at times, are expected to spread east across southern England overnight and Wednesday morning. Many parts of the warning area have already seen large rainfall accumulations over the past few days and therefore this further rain may cause come minor local surface water flooding. Lightning may be an additional hazard.

The public should be aware that some local disruption to transport looks likely.
